

Frank Zobel, M.Sc.

Addiction Switzerland, 1003 Lausanne, Switzerland

Frank Zobel is a researcher and public health expert for Addiction Switzerland, where he is the deputy director and co-head of the research department. He has worked before for the European Drugs Agency EUDA/EMCDDA (2006-2013), coordinating the European drug report and monitoring national drug situations and policies, and for a public health research institute (IUMSP) in Lausanne (1995-2006), evaluating the Swiss national drugs strategy. He has studied cannabis issues extensively with several projects looking at the content and impact of international legalisation policies, the structure and size of markets, and the patterns of use and their transformation. Currently, he conducts the scientific study of one of the Swiss cannabis pilot trials, implementing and testing a not-for-profit public health-oriented sales model in the city of Lausanne (Cann-I). He is also a member of the Swiss national advisory board on addiction (CFANT) as well as of the scientific committee of the French national monitoring centre on drugs and drug addiction (OFDT).
